Hambourg, March 19, N. S.

ON Monday laſt Baron Stain (who was formerly in the late Duke of Brunſwick's Service, but now in that of the King of Sweden as Landgrave) paſſed through this Townin his Way to Stockholm; from whence we are informed, that it was reſolved on the 27th paſt, O. S. in the Senate, that a Diet ſhould be called for the $\frac{14}{25}$ of May.

Hague, March 23, N. S. The Town of Dantzick having again applied to the States General for their Aſſiſtance, and likewiſe to uſe their good Offices with her Czariſh Majeſty in their Favour, Count Golofkin was Yeſterday invited to a Conference with the Deputies of the States, in which thoſe Deputies repreſented to him, how much their High Mightineſſes are concerned for the Welfare of that Town, in the Preſervation of which ſo many of their own Subjects are concerned; and how deſirous they are that the Czarina would not come to Extremities. Count Golofkin anſwered, That the Czarina had no Deſign againſt the Town, but only to oblige King Staniſlaus to quit it; that he was very ſorry that Town had drawn upon itſelf ſo great Inconveniences, but that he was ſure her Czariſh Majeſty would act with the greateſt Prudence on this Occaſion, ſince it was known that the People of Dantzick were not ſo much to blame as ſome few of the Magiſtrates, who were willing to ſacrifice the Town and the Intereſt of the People to their own private Views. He likewiſe ſaid, that whatever happened, Care would be taken that the Dutch Merchants ſhould not be Sufferers, and that he would acquaint his Court with what their High Mightineſſes had ſignified to him. In the mean time it is written from Berlin, that the Muſcovites waited only for their great Artillery to attack the Town in Form, having obtained a free Paſſage for the ſaid Artillery through the Territories of the King of Pruſſia. Count d'Uhlfeld, the Emperor's Miniſter, has had likewiſe a Conference with the States Deputies, and preſſes ſtill for Succours. The Commiſſioners of the Admiralty being ſent for, arrived here Yeſterday.
